

Inmaculada Moreno, Ph.D

Research Manager. R&D department. Igenomix Spain

Visiting Scholar. School of Medicine. Stanford University

She was graduated in Biochemical Sciences in 2002 and obtained her European PhD in 2007 in Molecular microbiology, which was awarded the best PhD thesis. During her postdoctoral training she specialized on Molecular Oncology and Regenerative Medicine, human embryonic stem cells and induced pluripotent stem cells. In 2014 joined the R&D department of Igenomix as a Torres-Quevedo researcher, where she is currently the research manager. From 2015 she collaborates at the Reproductive and Stem Cell Biology lab at Stanford University School of Medicine, where she is a Visiting Scholar from 2016. She is the author of more than 20 international publications in peer-review journals, has participated in several international projects and is currently supervising two PhD thesis.