

Michael O'Dwyer is Professor of Hematology at National University of Ireland, Galway and Director of Blood Cancer Network, Ireland. His research interests include the development of new immuno-therapeutic approaches, including strategies to activate macrophages as well as the use genetically modified NK cells for the treatment of Multiple Myeloma.