

Dr. Paula Rodríguez-Otero
Short biography

Dr. Paula Rodríguez-Otero studied medicine at the University of Navarra, Pamplona, Spain. Subsequently she completed her residency training program in hematology at the Clinic of the University of Navarra and became faculty at the department of the same institution. After completing her PhD she focused her clinical interest in the management and biology of allogeneic stem cell transplant, which brought her to perform a clinical fellowship in the bone marrow transplant division at the Hôpital Saint-Louis, in Paris. In 2011 she joined back the Department of Hematology at the University of Navarra, where she has become a member of the Myeloma Unit and leads the clinical trials and immunotherapy program under the direction of Professor Jesus San Miguel.