

Dr Renato Bassan worked as full-time hematologist at Bergamo Hospital where he set up the leukemia diagnostic section, the autologous bone marrow transplantation section and the leukemia clinics. He was trained at St. Bartholomew's Hospital (London, UK), lately reaching the position of honorary consultant. Since 2011 he is the Director of the Hematology Unit at Venice Hospitals. His main professional interest is in acute lymphoblastic leukemia and acute myeloid leukemia therapy. He has been leading prospective trials for the Northern Italy Leukemia Group (NILG) and GIMEMA, and is an active member the European Working Group on Adult ALL of the European LeukemiaNet.