

Nathan Treff is Chief Scientific Officer and has a long history in reproductive genetic testing. He is adjunct faculty at Rutgers University School of Medicine, where he teaches reproductive genetics. Nathan is the recipient of 2 General Program, 2 SART, and 2 SRBT Prize Paper Awards, and the 2013 New Investigator Award from ASRM. He has published over 90 peer reviewed papers in Reproductive Genetics and serves as a member of the ASRM Research Committee, and Senior Associate Editor of JARG, and Editor of Fertility and Sterility. He holds a PhD in Biochemistry from Washington State University. Dr. Treff also served as the Director of Molecular Biology Research at Reproductive Medicine Associates of New Jersey for 11 years.